Darth Vader, Obi-Wan result of sci-fi explosion

By JAY WATSON
Staff Writer

Holy comets Dr. Astro! A giant 'Science Fiction Explosion' from Planet X has just landed, and it's heading for the big city.... There, now that I've got your attention let's proceed.

It seems with the recent phenomenal success of "Star Wars," science fiction—or science fantasy as George Lucas terms it—is on the minds of everyone who makes the claim to having one. But with apologies to Darth Vader and Obi-Wan, the fact is, the depth and popularity of science fiction and fantasy (sf&f) preceded and now surpasses even this cinematic tour de force.

"We live in a science fiction world," said James Gunn, science fiction writer and professor of English at the University of Kansas.

And in the technological sense Gunn stated, "We are watching pictures in our living rooms that move and speak...roaring across transcontinental highways at breakneck speeds, or through the skies faster than sound. We are living in houses where climate is automatically controlled and working in buildings that scrape the sky. We—or at least a handful of us—have at our fingertips the power to destroy another nation, or the world. We have walked on the moon."

But science fiction is much more than the "predictable" fiction of the scientist. "Nuts and bolts" stories seldom endure the test of time. Rather it is the writing skills of the new breed of sf&f authors that is beginning to slowly capture the

Kiralyfalvi is appointed head of speech department

By JUDY MOULOS
Staff Writer

A man chosen by his colleagues above any other candidate, has been named to head the speech department at Wichita State University.

Bela Kiralyfalvi, migrated from Hungary to the United States

Speech head

On the stage of the Pit Theater in Wilner Auditorium Bela Kiralyfalvi, new head of the speech department, leading his Acting I students in a series of exercises.

20 years ago. After teaching at several other midwest universities he came to WSU as an assistant professor in the speech department four years ago.

When Robert Smith, former head of the speech department was appointed Associate Dean of Liberal Arts, Kiralyfalvi was recommended by his associates in the speech department to become the new department head.

Kiralyfalvi's emphasis has been on theater, a department which encompasses that discipline as well as rhetoric and communications and radio, television and film.

Coming to WSU in 1973 to teach dramatic theory, criticism and playwriting, Kiralyfalvi has taught a variety of classes in theater arts, including acting and directing and this semester a course in voice and diction.

In addition to his new administrative responsibilities, Kiralyfalvi will continue teaching two classes and team teaching a third class. He said he has always enjoyed teaching and is enthusiastic about teaching a course in beginning acting.

"I have always enjoyed teaching acting," he said. "It is the kind of class where the instructor's involvement is almost total. There is no separation between class and instructor. It is so different from teaching the standard type of class."

Few theater students will ever find their way to the footlights of Broadway or the movie sets of Hollywood. Many students, nevertheless, enter college with such imaginations and souls of the reading public.

And the going has been slow. SF&F until a few years ago, was considered in many literary circles at least, the lowest form of fiction. But times change, people adapt, and—more importantly—people's attitudes shift. Thus sf&f, long the black sheep of the literary world, has partially cast off its stigma of 'unrespectability.'

As Gunn said, "To a large extent sf&f has burst from its ghetto in the pulp magazines and monster movies and has once again captured an ever-widening circle of serious readers."

The reasons for sf&f's new-found acceptance vary. But it was in the last half of the 60s when things began to change. With social and political unrest both at home and abroad, America's youth were abandoning 50s sentimentality for 60s cynicism. Author Peter Beagle has written that sf&f provided an escape from the trials of a troubled world.

One escape frequently cited is J.R.R. Tolkien's The Hobbit and Lord of the Rings.

Another boon to sf&f's credibility was the emergence of best-selling novels from the genre such as Giles Goat-Boy, The Andromeda Strain, On The Beach, Dune, Stranger in a Strange Land, and The Terminal Man.

Still others maintain it was the visual excursions into sf&f which began the momentum.

On television, "Star Trek" came and went, only to revive and burgeon in syndication. Stanley Kubrick's spectacular spellbinder, "2001: A Space Odyssey," proved sf&f on the big screen could be commercially viable without being campy.

So "Star Wars" isn't the cause of the sf&f explosion, it is simply another result, another manifestation of the field's growth.

One of the largest increases has come in the publishing field. There are approximately 100 sf&f titles released every month. A browse through the sf&f section of any bookstore confirms this.

Fifteen years ago most bookstores did not have separate sf&f sections. Today the sf&f section of most bookstores is at least one-fourth to one-third the size of the one assigned to general fiction. An employee at Rectors Bookstore in downtown Wichita, said sf&f titles outsell every other type of book with the exception of the 'new arrivals.'

Another example of the expanding field is the specialty magazines, Cosmos and the Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction.

In the just released 1977 Locus survey (Locus being the foremost newspaper of the science fiction field), the results show the average age of the sf&f reader to be 27. The poll also found that 30 percent of the readers is made up of students, with 93 percent having attended college at some point. Also, the average reader spends approximately $135 on new paperbacks each year.

Just how popular is sf&f in Wichita? While basic readership is undeterminable, the fans in this genre are not noted for their timidity or introspection.

James K. Burk, instructor of the Free University's Science Fiction and Fantasy Seminar said, "There's a big difference between people who read science fiction and active organized fans. Any time you get people in a group, then you're talking about something organized. The number of readers has always far exceeded the number of real fans."

Burk, who also writes sf criticism for Nickelodeon and Delap's F&SF Review, believes good science fiction (sf) is demanding of the reader while bad sf is like any other bad form of literature—it makes no demands at all.

"The thing that made sf more respectable wasn't the escapism nearly as much as it was the entrance of fine writers," Burk said. "In a way, sf can be more realistic than any other form of literature, because one approaches realism from its blindside. One can sometimes explain reality best with a heavy use of the fantastic."

Wichita State University student, Clifford R. McMurray, also an sf book reviewer for the California-based Delap's F&SF

Instructor teaches awareness as secret of self-defense

By Debbie Evangelisti

Awareness is the secret to self defense, according to Fred Harvey, a Wichita State University physical education instructor. "Know how to avoid an incident before it starts and most important don't make yourself vulnerable," is Harvey's philosophy on self-defense.

In his Self Defense 101 class Harvey has designed a program for men and women to learn basic steps in preventing a rape or a mugging. Harvey, who has a black belt in karate, not only teaches students how to prevent being assaulted, but also what techniques to use once an attack takes place. He stresses that self-defense, while not requiring much physical training, does require learning self-defense tactics.

A portion of the class is devoted to teaching how homes and offices can be made more secure against burglary.

Harvey schedules guest speakers from the Wichita Police Department to aid him in this portion of the class. The police officers instruct the students on what should be done when a burglary takes place in the home or on the job.

Other self-defense topics discussed include safety while driving, what should be done when cornered in a car by an attacker, telephone precautions that should be taken when talking to a stranger and how valuables can be made more secure.

Harvey said the class has helped the community to become aware of self-defense measures. "Some of the employers of my protected, well-lit and safe for employes and customers to enter and exit.

Harvey said that according to statistics one of four women in the United States will be assaulted or robbed during her lifetime. He said a victim needs to know when to run to get out of a dangerous situation once it occurs and, even more importantly, how to avoid getting into the situation in the first place.

students are now taking precautions for their employes," he said. Part of the course includes having students check their places of employment to see if they are well-

AROUND THE WORLD

SYDNEY, Australia—A Sydney fashion model dubbed the "Camel Lady" has ended a 621-mile, five-month trek across Western Australia's forbidding Gibson Desert accompanied by only four camels and a dog.

Robyn Davidson, 21, dropped from sight two weeks ago after her journey attracted wide-spread publicity. But Dawn Priddis, a constable's wife in the small town of Wiluna, said Sunday the Camel Lady had slipped quietly into Wiluna, her final destination on the western edge of the desert.

BINT JBEIL, Lebanon—Palestinian guerrillas are riding "shotgun" for neutral United Nations truce observers in an unprecedented protective arrangement in embattled southern Lebanon, guerrilla spokesmen say.

ACROSS THE NATION

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—A pretty 19-year-old banker's daughter, kidnapped four days before from her college campus, was driven to North Carolina on Sunday and released unharmed after a $150,000 ransom was paid. Within hours, authorities arrested a man and a woman.

WASHINGTON—The Environmental Protection Agency, hoping to take some of the noise and clamor out of city life, is proposing regulations to require buses to run more quietly.

"Buses are an integral component of the urban noise problem," EPA Administrator Douglas M. Costle said Sunday.

WASHINGTON—The world economy is characterized by high unemployment and serious inflation in many countries and there is little likelihood of any rapid improvement, the International Monetary Fund said Sunday.

The fund said it will require "skill, patience and courage" on the part of many governments to keep the situation from getting worse.

IN KANSAS

TOPEKA—The Kansas high school state indoor track meet next March will be the last one under a decision by the board of directors of the Kansas State High School Activities Association.

The board voted Saturday to eliminate the meet effective in 1979.

Graney hopes to make sociology career-oriented

By RAMONA KEE

Making sociology classes more career-oriented is one of the goals of Marshall Graney, new chairperson of Wichita State University's sociology department.

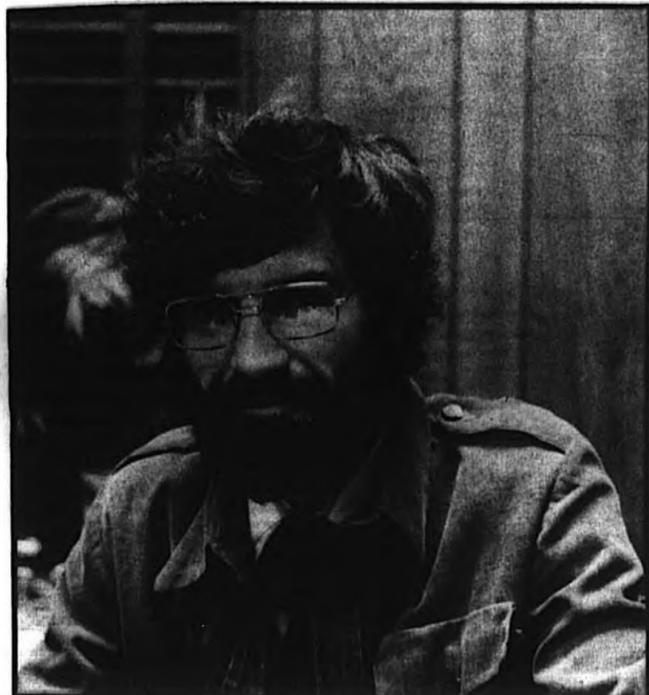

Graney, who first started teaching at WSU in 1975, said he wants to create "sequences of courses that form career-oriented packages" for students. He said he would like to see students graduate with specialized skills that would enable them to qualify for various jobs in the field of sociology.

"These special strengths need to be passed on to students so they can cash in on them in the job market," Graney said.

Graney is currently studying the social factors involved in life lengths of men and women. Because men die at earlier ages than women, social problems such as isolation often occur for women. It is Graney's "working hypothesis" that men and women might eventually meet a balance in their longevities.

"The increase in smoking, alcohol use and stressful occupations for women may be causing the rate of longevity increase in women to slow down," Graney said. He added that if male longevity continues its steady increase, the possibility exists that men may catch up with women in the number of years they live.

Graney said one of his duties as sociology department chairperson will be to review sociology courses currently being offered and add new courses as they are needed. He plans on making classes in his department more appealing to WSU students by conducting a study on which times and places are best for holding classes. He will then try to adapt the department's curriculum to better fit the students' schedules.

Meat & Potatoes

By Patrick Jennings

Evangelism is big business. If you doubt that, just take a look at recent disclosures about Billy Graham's financial holdings; $19.3 million of blue-chip stocks like AT&T and IBM; $3.9 million of prime undeveloped mountain land in western North Carolina; and yearly gifts of more than $25 million.

Graham of course is not the only culprit. Every race and nationality has its own, from Rev. Ike to Sun Myung Moon. And, of course, there's Meat and Potatoes own Rev. Bobby....

"Good evening, fellow investors, and a big hello to you from 'The Great Auditor', and me—I'm Reverend Bobby.

"He has sent me here this evening to speak to you about what happens to each and every one of us after we've cashed our final check and closed out all our earthly accounts.

"Hold it. I can hear some of you saying, 'But, Rev. Bobby, we've bought all our Certificates of Heavenly Deposits. We've built up large and impressive Soul Savings Accounts. We've purchased all the surreal estate we can possibly use.' Well, I say, poop.

"Don't scoff, Eternal Investors. I was just talking to the Great Auditor this morning and He told me that accounts receivable is depleting rapidly.

"Do you have any idea what a condominium costs up there? The rate of inflation is tremendous. He said to me just before I walked out here before you, 'REV. BOBBY, TELL MY ETERNAL INVESTORS THAT THE MARKET IS A BEAR. TELL THEM IF THEY DON'T INVEST MORE CASH QUICKLY, I MAY HAVE TO CLOSE UP SHOP. IT'LL BE LIKE THE CRASH OF '29 ALL OVER AGAIN. ONLY WORSE. AND THIS TIME, FOREVER.'

"So, I've told you, 'Poop,' you might say. And perhaps, a few years ago you might have been right. But now is the time for everyone to dig deep and contribute more than they can afford to insure their Eternal Savings Accounts. Remember, there are not tax-sheltered annuities—up there.

"I can hear you saying, 'Rev. Bobby, exactly when is the Second Mortgage due, and what would my best investments be, and how many dividends and how much interest can I accrue, and would I be better off investing in something other than Heavenly stocks and bonds?'

"Well, to you people I say, 'shut up.' Listen. He has a mortgage on this earth, and He is coming to collect because we're all overdue on our payments. Unless you are prepared to take out all your worldly savings and invest them in your own, personal ranch-style heaven with a two-car garage, clay tennis courts and perhaps, if you choose, a nice Olympic size pool. He's going to cash in your chips for you and keep it all. He can do that you know.

"Let me ask you another question, fellow Eternal Investors. How do you think you're going to get from down here, to up there? Do you think Pan Am is going to be selling tickets? No way, Jay. The only ticket outlet you've got is Rev. Bobby, and the tickets don't come cheap. And of course, the more you contribute, the better your seat on the flight up there.

"Perhaps some of you who have made better investments than others, those of you who have more cash readily available would like to place a down payment on your served seat. Then you could join these famous people who already have booked window seats for the Second Mortgage:

Elvis Presley
Lyndon Johnson
Lady Bird Johnson
Dwight Eisenhower
Rev. Bobby
John (Duke) Wayne
Elmer Childress (coach section)
Dr. Renee Richards
Checkers Nixon

"And remember, there is no logical reason for any individual with sound investments to miss this flight and suffer the fines of eternal debt and inflation. He doesn't care which bank you worship at while you're here, as long as you reinvest in His bank, before you make the big move."

WSU students range in age from 16 to 88.

There are 3,145 graduate students at WSU. Students over 23 years old number 7,415.

There are 1,408 students 40 years old or older and 1,424 minority students are enrolled at WSU.

During the 1976 spring semester WSU had a ratio of 1.28 part-time students to every full-time student. Fort Hays State University had the highest ratio in the state of full-time to part-time students for the same period.

Rhatigan said WSU has a large number of part-time students because so many of them are employed. He estimates that three of every four WSU students work while attending school.

According to Rhatigan percentages of students from Kansas and Sedgwick County were 93.9 percent and 71.5 percent, respectively. Six percent of WSU students are

New writers cause explosion

Review, said the height of sf is the story that examines a problem which could only occur in the future and then gives the human solution to it.

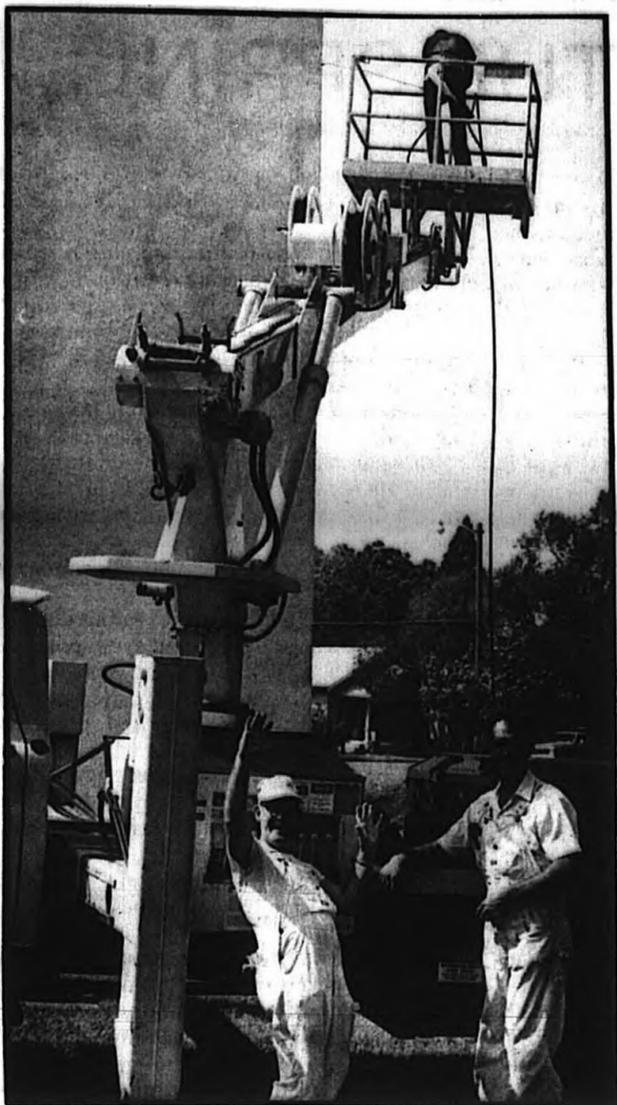

"We do have our leeches...all literature does," McMurray said. "We have our Harold Robbinses, we have our Ron Goularts. But every literature has to be judged by the best examples of it, rather than the worst."

Approaching the subject of "Star Wars," Burk takes a rather disdainful view of the mushrooming cult that has sprung up around the movie.

"I enjoyed 'Star Wars,'" he said. "I don't want any mistakes made there. But I think that anybody who is attached to a cult item is only going to blow a lot of money. He may make a few writers rich and successful but as far as bringing any degree of intelligence or anything else to the field—no way."

McMurray takes a somewhat different view. "I don't think cult items are to be despised simply because they are cults," he explained. "What I think the Heinlein juveniles did for me, and what 'Star Wars' is going to do for others, is open up a sense of the future; that it is going to be worth living for. We've got our problems, and the future is going to have its problems, but for all that, the future is going to be a better place somehow than this time."

Refacing completed on Memorial '70

A refacing job has been completed on Memorial '70, the monument for those individuals who lost their lives in the tragic plane crash in Colorado Oct. 2, 1970.

The new surface was applied to circumvent the possibility of moisture seeping through hairline cracks and damaging the structure.

According to Vernon Hite, Wichita State University paint supervisor, the new material is an acrylic fiber that will expand and contract with the temperature thus preventing cracks from developing.

Although expressing doubts that damage would occur if the monument were left untreated, Hite explained the resurfacing job as "an ounce of prevention."

The refacing took Hite and his crew about three days. Before the fiber material could be painted on, the monument had to be cleaned. A 900-pound pressure hose with a mixture of detergent and water was used to wash the six-year-old memorial.

"Just like a car wash," Hite said. Hite explained that because no one had worked with the acrylic material before he wanted to be sure that it was being properly applied before going to the top of the other structure.

The cost for the maintenance project, according to Roger Lowe, vice-president of business affairs for WSU, "is really only the materials cost, since we have our own crew doing the labor."

Lowe said the material cost "about $2,000." The original construction cost for the memorial was $28,596.

"The monument has been virtually maintenance-free since then," explained Lowe. "All we have done up to now has just been the usual landscaping and grounds keeping."

New director for fund

Richard R. Conlon has been appointed director of the Annual Fund at Wichita State University, according to H.R. Reidenbaugh, executive vice president of the WSU Board of Trustees.

Conlon, a 1976 graduate of WSU, succeeds Thomas E. Delcourt to be director of the Special Gift Programs with responsibility for the corporate giving program and the special gift clubs.

IRIS IN THE SPRING

By CHERYL HOLT

At 10:15 Jody went out to play. It was hot outside, hot enough to make him dance on the burning concrete. He bounced on the sidewalk awhile searing his feet with prickly needles of heat. When Jody felt the warmth baking his entrails, he trotted to the sandbox and flopped into it, scattering sand. Tonka trucks, and plastic soldiers like a cue ball slamming through a racked-up set.

Then he saw it. It was lying under the willow tree observing him. Jody didn't know what it was, but he called it sea monster for want of something better. It was a very big sea monster. It looked even bigger to Jody because he was just a little boy, but it was big enough to scare a grown-up, too. Jody froze in the sand and watched it.

The sea monster sighed a little, and the sigh floated in waves down its scaly side. Then it yawned and flopped over on its belly.

"Hello," it said.

"Hello," said Jody.

They stared at each other.

"Why don't you come closer?" asked the sea monster. "Are you afraid?"

Jody was, but he knew that fear was cowardly; so he said, "No, but you might eat me."

"Nonsense," the monster scoffed. "I don't eat little boys. My teeth aren't big enough. See?" And to prove it he opened his mouth very wide and displayed a row of popcorn teeth. Jody viewed them with interest.

"Say," he exclaimed, "that's really keen! They look kind of small, though. Can you eat with them?"

The monster was incensed. "Of course!" he roared in offended tones. "I have 102 teeth, all very strong and pointed. As for being small, my 102 sharp teeth are better than ten enormous dull ones!"

"I didn't mean to make you mad," Jody hastened to say. "I just wanted to know. I think your teeth are very nice."

The monster was somewhat mollified by this. "Well, perhaps I lost my temper a bit, but it's very trying to own small teeth when everyone expects you to have large ones. I don't suppose you have any problems like that."

"Not with teeth," the boy answered. "I just have to brush them and be sure I never eat candy at school. I bet you can't eat candy in school, either."

"My stars! I don't go to school!" exclaimed the thing.

"Don't go to school!" Jody was astonished. He figured the monster was at least an eighth grader. "Do you go to church?"

"No."

"The doctor's office?"

"No."

"To see your cousins?"

"No."

"Well, what do you do?"

"I go wherever I please and do whatever I want" the monster replied. He switched his tail against the willow bark.

"Can you eat ten packages of licorice and drink fifteen malts?" Jody asked.

"If I want, yes, although I really don't care for licorice."

"Can you go to Kiddie World and ride the roller-coaster all day?"

"Of course. We monsters lead very pleasant lives. We always do whatever we want. How do you suppose I turned up in your iris bed this morning?"

Jody stepped over to the blooming iris. Sure enough, there was a wide swath of broken flowers down the middle. When he turned back, the monster had moved to the sandbox. It playfully flipped sand at him with its tail. "This is a very nice sandbox. I rather like it."

"Thank you, but you are crushing my castle," Jody said.

"Oh, I'm terribly sorry," the monster exclaimed. He heaved himself over, sat up startled, and removed a G-I Joe tank from underneath his tail.

"That's all right," Jody said. "I can build another castle." He squatted beside the monster and pushed the sand into a pile. At this distance Jody became aware of the lucid eyes upon him. The monster had very mean eyes. Jody thought maybe he'd better get out of there. He stood up, carefully dusted off his trousers, and sprinted to the house.

In the kitchen his mother was baking cookies. "There's a monster outside," Jody told her.

"Oh, Jody," she sighed. "I'm really very busy. Go play with your basketball."

"But what about the sea monster?"

"I don't have time to play games," she said. "Go tell your father."

Jody's father was working in the study. He was a big company executive with lots of papers. He should have known all about monsters.

"Dad, there's a sea monster in my sandbox," Jody began.

His father decided to humor him. "Oh, that's too bad. Maybe if you wait long enough, it will go away."

"I don't think so," Jody said. "It looks pretty settled to me."

"Well, son, I would go chase it off, but this is a very important contract I'm working on, and I don't have the time."

Everyone was too busy to hear about the sea monster. Jody wandered to the window and sat down. "It might have gone away," he thought. He stared at the oblong patch of sand. Nothing.

"They were right all along," Jody said, and ran out to play in the streaming sunshine. For a while he bounced his ball on the concrete walk. All was soft and lovely in the universe. Up, up the ball flew into the sapphire sky. Down, down it fell into Jody's waiting arms.

Once he missed, though, and the ball rolled into the irises. Jody skipped to the gaily-colored patch and reached into the blossoms. He stared into one golden orb and then another.

The next instant his legs were whipped out from under him by a savage tail, and he floated into the downy quilt of the iris. Grind, grind, grind sang a hundred merry little teeth.

The butterflies fluttered on the marigolds and dipped their wings to the fluffy clouds. On the limb of the willow tree a perky sparrow chirped a spring melody to his gentle lover on the ground.

In the iris bed the serpent sat up and daintily licked its fingers with little popping sounds. Then it stretched its lithe body and uttered a contented burp. Jody's mother came out on the step. She called "Jody! Jody!" to an empty void. Her voice rose and fell on the waves of the morning.

The monster smiled a little to itself and slithered off into the grass. Behind him the red-tipped iris nodded in the breeze.

News from Russia's 64 chess bulletin on the World Chess Championship indicates the candidates' matches are narrowing with Korchnoi (a recent USSR defector) defeating Polugaevsky 8½-4½ and Spassky leading Portisch 8-6, needing only a draw to win the match.

Korchnoi is generally favored to beat Spassky although Spassky seems to have regained his fighting strength. Karpov (current World Champion) may not defend his title against Korchnoi. Speculation of a match between Fischer and one of these three players continues.

FIDE, the international chess headquarters, has announced that Diane Savereide of California and Ruth Orton of Arkansas, both 22, have been selected to join the 110 International Women Masters in the world. Thirty chess masters were among the 714 players in the Fifth Annual Paul Masson American Class Championship in California. The master division ended in a four way split between Fritzinger, Grefe, Tarjan and Christiansen. The event featured $15,000 in prizes plus free between-round wine breaks.

The Kansas Chess Association recently held elections of officers. Elected were: Chuck Bell, President; Dan Prichard, Valley Center, Vice President; and Matt Scherer, Salina, Secretary. For the first time in nearly a decade the KCA is headquartered in Wichita.

The WSU Chess Club meets Thursday nights in room 254 of the CAC from 6-9:30 p.m. Everyone is welcome to attend at no charge. If enough interest is shown, different meeting times will be established. If you have a suggestion, let someone in the club know.

The McConnell AFB Chess Club meets Sundays at the Redmond Center on base from 1-7 p.m. All civilians are welcome to attend. No small children or pets are allowed. Directions and a visitor's pass can be obtained from the base gate.

Each eight-ounce glass of water served takes another 16 ounces for washing — a total of 24 ounces for each glass served. Besides, it takes energy to make the ice for the water and to heat the water for washing.

dreams. Kiralyfalvi said he never tries to disillusion students about their potential.

"We definitely do not mislead," he said. "On the other hand, we are not a professional actor training school. At the end of a performance we don't say 'You're the greatest' or 'You're no good', but merely attempt an honest response to a particular acting problem," he said.

"We face certain specific acting problems and we have to face them together. We try to see in the process how successful we are together and from this, the actual effect."

Sororities relocate across 21st

Wichita State University's sororities all have new houses on Omega Court, north of the Corbin Education Center parking lot.

Three sororities, Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Gamma and Tri-Delta, have already moved into their houses. Alpha Phi members plan to move into their new house beginning Sept. 23. The Gamma Phi Beta house is currently under construction, and the sorority members are planning to move during Christmas break.

Two sororities will have members living in the houses. Alpha Chi Omega now has nine girls living in with housemother Louise Richards, who said the arrangement is working very well. Alpha Phi will have living facilities also.

The new houses provide more space and better facilities for the sororities. The Delta Gamma house has a dining area to accommodate all 70 members, an upper tier that serves as a lounge with television and stereo and a sound-proof study area in the basement.

The additional space also allows the sororities to have more meetings and activities for their alumni and associated groups.

According to some sorority members, the only drawback is the location. "We can't drop by the house between classes now," said Delta Gamma president Susan Schroeder.

Crossing 21st St. during heavy traffic hours is also a problem. The sororities are hoping a crosswalk will be built.

In spite of the fact that most students will never aspire to the success of their dreams, Kiralyfalvi pointed out that some do.

"Despite the abundance of opportunities available in television, radio and film and on the stage to a lesser degree," he said, "there are so many more people than jobs. There are many really well qualified people that never make it. The chances are very small," he continued, "but a few people do make it. It is not impossible."

He pointed out one such person he knew when he was an instructor at Parsons College in Iowa.

"Marcia Wallace of 'The Bob Newhart Show' was at Parsons," he said. "She was always unique. Her height was unique. She had a unique face and an ability to do comedy in a certain way."

When Kiralyfalvi was in Los Angeles last summer, he ran into one of his old students who wanted to be a television script writer. The student was working as a writer on the television game show, "Family Feud."

Kiralyfalvi said it appears to the television viewer that game show conversation is spontaneous and unrehearsed, but often there are writers behind the scenes pounding out the conversational trivia that passes from emcee to contestant.

Shockers pounded by ISU Cyclones 39-9

For the first time since 1964, the Wichita State University Shockers scored against a Big Eight Conference team. But that was little consolation as WSU lost to 19th-ranked Iowa State 39-9 in Ames Saturday.

WSU's first score came in the third quarter on a 38 yard pass from Shocker quarterback Scott Burger to tight end Bob Cicero. That brought the score to 28-6 in favor of the Cyclones.

The Shockers then added a 36 yard Kent Van Vleet field goal in the fourth quarter making the count 28-9 with 11:36 remaining.

ISU was not content with that margin. The Cyclones used the last 31 seconds to increase the lead as third string signal-caller John Quinn scored on a 20 yard run.

What upset WSU head coach Jim Wright was ISU's attempt at a field goal, on first down, with 14 seconds left, after a Shocker fumble.

"What was the score?" Wright asked, and then answered. "It was 35-9. I didn't like anything about the field goal or the last 31 seconds. It (the field goal attempt) wasn't exactly the greatest play in the books."

When asked if he had seen anything like it before, Wright replied, "Only in the Big Eight. Most of the time they want to get into the top 10 and they think kicking field goals to up the score will do it."

Wright saw three of his players go down with injuries that could put them out for the rest of the year.

Burger and offensive guard Jerry Hodges both suffered knee injuries and safety Mike

Landrum, team captain, left with a shoulder injury. Seriousness of the injuries won't be known until later this week.

Linebacker Ron Shumon also left the game with what was believed to be a broken hand, but later reports indicated it may not be that serious.

Burger was having an impressive passing day before leaving in the fourth quarter. The sophomore hit 12 of 21 passes for 190 yards. Bryan Hanning was on the receiving end of five aeriels for 102 yards and Cicero grabbed three passes for 87 yards.

The WSU ground attack was not as successful. Shocker runners gained only 46 yards on 34 carries against the fast and rugged ISU defense.

"We had too many offensive problems in the first and second quarters," Wright said.

The Shockers lost two fumbles and were penalized ten times for 69 yards, most of which came in the opening minutes.

"Our offense played much better in the third and fourth quarters. Our execution was much better," the fourth-year head coach stated.

Wright said his defense played well despite being given poor field positions numerous times, particularly in the first half.

The Cyclones were never to put together a long scoring drive. The longest was 58 yards.

All Big Eight running back Dexter Green led the ground gainers with 85 yards on 16 carries. Most of his yardage came on a 51-yard touchdown run in the first quarter. Green scored two other touchdowns in the first half and did not play in the second.

WSU women netters split at K-State, sweep Bethany

By KATHY IVY

Wichita State University's women's tennis team split six seeded matches with Kansas State University Friday, then came back to sweep all contests from Bethany on Saturday in the Manhattan two-day event. It was the first outing for WSU.

Shocker No. 1 seed Kore Gregg lost to K-State's Mary Lou Kullegen 6-2, 6-1.

Against Bethany, Gregg lost the initial set 4-6. Down love-5 in the second set, Gregg then bounced back to claim the set 7-5 and went to win the match 6-1 in the third set.

No. 2 seed Mary Pecht was victorious throughout the weekend losing only in a doubles match, paired with No. 5 seed Jodi Butterbaugh, to a K-State duo.

Kay St. Peter, No. 3 for the Shockers, was defeated in the KSU match 0-6, 2-6. St. Peter then stifled her Bethany opponent 6-0, 6-0.

Kathy Wilde, playing in the No. 4 spot, and Butterbaugh both defeated their KSU rivals while No. 6 Shocker Ceryl Maloney lost.

The doubles teams of Gregg-St. Peter and Pecht-Butterbaugh lost to the Wildcats.

Third team of Wilde and Maloney forced their match to three sets, but lost the final duel 3-6 for a KSU doubles sweep.

The WSU netters gave up only one set to Bethany, that in a singles match, while the doubles teams yielded only eight games in taking straight sets from Bethany.

The tennis team battles Emporia State University Sept. 19 at Emporia.

Pittsburg outspeeds cross country team

Wichita State University opened its 1977 cross country season finishing behind Pittsburg State University at Echo Hills Golf Course Friday. The Shockers totaled 32 points to Pittsburg's 25.

Kendall Smith, WSU senior, finished third behind two Pittsburg runners clocking in a time of 20:32 over the four mile course.

Brent Coffman, another WSU senior, garnered fifth with a time of 20:49.

Rounding out top seven for the Shockers were Greg Jones and Dennis Moon, both freshmen, sophomore John Freeman and juniors Jay Mean and Tim Anders.

The victory was Pittsburg's second consecutive win over coach Herm Wilson's squad.

WSU's next meet will be the Wichita State Gold Classic at 4:00 p.m. Sept. 16 at Echo Hills.

Baseball workouts beginning

By STEVE PIKE
Sports Editor

Baseball may be winding down in the major leagues, but the sport is just beginning at Wichita State University.

After a six year absence, baseball returned to WSU on Wednesday as new head coach Gene Stephenson welcomed 36 prospects to opening fall practice at McAdams Park.

Stephenson, a former University of Oklahoma assistant before coming to WSU, said that approximately 20 of the Shocker hopefuls were walk-ons.

"Some are recruited walk-ons," Stephenson explained. "They came at no cost to our athletic department."

Quickness is what Stephenson is looking for in his players immediately. Also, "guys who really have the desire and want to excel."

"I don't want to go three-quarters of the way into the season and find out that a guy is not going to be a competitive player and drop by the wayside," said Stephenson.

Stephenson plans on playing nearly 80 games in WSU's initial season.

The schedule is about three-quarters complete. Games are scheduled with Missouri, Kansas State and Oklahoma State among others.

"It's going to be an uphill battle for us in every game we play next spring until we get some confidence and get some experience in our people," he said.

The Shockers will continue to practice at McAdams Park until their own field next to WSU golf course is completed in October.

"We will be able to start to work, if all things go well, by the 12th of October," Stephenson stated.

The WSU field will have an astro-turf infield and grass outfield. Stephenson said his squad will be able to practice on the infield at once but the outfield is being seeded, so the girl's softball field will be used for outfield practice.

The Shockers' season will begin March 4, 1978 in Wichita. Practice for the spring will start the first day of school second semester and fall practice will end the final day of this semester.

"It's a year round program here," Stephenson said. "The weather will limit us on some outdoor practices, but there is a lot we can accomplish on the chalkboard, in the weight room, and in the basketball arena."
