Pied Piper book store to close its doors

By JAY W. WATSON
Staff Writer

If you've taken an exploratory pride in digging through heaps of dust covered tomes to find that precious first-edition Rex Stout mystery, or that curious out-of-print historical biography, or if you've enjoyed watching the kittens romp (the older cats usually just sleep)—then know this:

Steve Hauck—The Sunflower

Moving

Jack Whitesell, owner of the Pied Piper Bookstore, a campus landmark to many WSU students, giving a little TLC to one of the many cats who add to the atmosphere of the shop.

The Pied Piper book store will play its last tune in less than six weeks. Wichita State University has purchased the property at 1749 N. Fairmount, south of the Communications Building, for use as a campus parking lot.

According to George Platt, WSU's director of planning and institutional studies, the acquisition of the land south of KMUW is part of a program designed to look at areas around the campus.

"This is done so we can best decide how to consolidate," Platt said. "We can't let happen here what has been occurring on Vassar. We can't have areas turning into slums."

Both The Grinder Man and the Pied Piper book store will close their doors to business on or before Nov. 1.

The purchase of land adjacent to the existing campus boundaries started last spring when the city floated a bond issue for just such a purpose, said Platt.

"And then when we heard that The Grinder Man wanted to sell, we went ahead and purchased the lot that the book store is on too."

Jack F. Whitesell, literary entrepreneur, but better known as the owner of the Pied Piper, said he was notified of the sale by his landlord Glen Maple.

Whitesell said Maple indicated the University wanted the land and was going to get it one way or the other—even having the book store condemned as a last resort. Understanding the inevitable, Maple sold.

Whitesell took his landlord's action in his typical easy-going way. "It's just a part of the normal day-to-day business world—commercial life," he said.

Platt said WSU has gained in this present land purchase a buffer strip on the south side of the campus. The buffer strip will become a new parking lot; something that is definitely needed, he said.

State architect held responsible

By KATE McLEMORE
Staff Writer

Louis Krueger, who resigned Sept. 12 as state architect, is responsible for what may exceed $2,000,000 of "pure waste" because of architectural and construction defect on buildings, said the staff of State Sen. Norman Gaar, R-Westwood.

David Barclay, administrative assistant to Sen. Gaar, directed the preparation of a report for the legislative Ways and Means Committee which examined the construction of State buildings.

Among the 32 buildings examined were the Life Sciences Building, Clinton Hall, McKnight Art Center and Liberal Arts and Sciences Building at Wichita State University. The report estimated it would cost $497,116 just to replace bricks on the Life Sciences Building.

"I estimate on the research to date, after doing slightly more than one-half of the study, that there will be close to $2,000,000 of pure waste attributable to the state architect's office," said Barclay.

Barclay emphasized that whether the state could recover damages in a lawsuit on the buildings would depend on the interpretation of the Kansas statute of limitations, i.e. when the five-year period to file claims began.

Debate team wins four rounds in first contest

By JUDY MOULOS
Staff Writer

Wichita State University's Debate Society got off to a slow start in its first tournament of the year in Hutchinson last weekend. John Schunk, assistant professor of speech communication and director of forensics is the debate coach.

Schunk said the three WSU teams won four and lost two of the rounds but did not receive enough speaker points to move into the quarter-finals of the tournament.

Schunk came to WSU from Fresno State University of California last year and under his guidance the Debate Society qualified for the National Debate Tournament finals for the first time since 1968.

WSU swept all first-place honors in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament last year and also won first-place at both the University of Kansas and the Kansas State University forensics tournament.

This year Schunk is building new teams since most of the society's members are freshmen and sophomores.

This past weekend he had an opportunity to assess the team's performances.

"I think it looks promising for the future," he said, "but we have some work to do."

The debate topic this year is: "Resolved that law enforcement agencies in the U.S. should be given greater freedom in the investigation and/or prosecution of felony crime."

Debate teaches a number of skills, Schunk said. Because the same topic is used all year, debaters get an in depth knowledge of the subject matter. He said the students also learn research skills and additional skills as well.

"I think it teaches you how to organize material and your arguments," he said, "because in debate, it is very difficult to deal with stream of consciousness proof. I think it also teaches communication skills in delivering arguments to others."

He said debaters also learn what he terms "argumentation skills." That includes learning how to take a topic apart and decide the important issues, use of evidence, use of reasoning and refutation, which is the process of attacking and giving arguments.

Most of the teams' members have had high school debate experience but Schunk said it was not a prerequisite to try out for the team.

"High school experience is a plus," he said, but sometimes they (students) have to learn to break old habits. I frequently get more enthusiasm, motivation and drive from students with little experience."

In addition to representing WSU in tournaments on other campuses, Schunk said, the Debate Society hosts two tournaments in the fall.

WSU will host the Ark Valley League High School Debate Tournament on Nov. 4 and 5, and the Mel Moorhouse Invitational Intercollegiate Forensics Tournament will be held Nov. 19-21.

Schunk said last year the intercollegiate tournament was attended by 45 colleges and universities from Alabama to California.

WSU's Debate Society is made up equally of men and women. It is open to all full-time undergraduate students in good academic standing.

WSU discredits Krueger

At a hearing in July on the WSU campus, the Ways and Means Committee questioned Krueger for several hours about the results of the report.

"It was the general feeling of the committee members and chairman after the meeting that they understood that I was not to blame or that I didn't create these problems," said Krueger.

"The committee came to the conclusion that his staff (state architect's) didn't inform him adequately, but it was his responsibility as an administrator to set up information systems which would bring the problems to his attention," Barclay said.

"WSU was loaded for bear to discredit me at the hearing in July," Krueger said. University officials said Krueger did not watch out for the University's interest.

"A very good example of what I was up against is the roofing problem on buildings at Kansas State University," Krueger said. "One roof in particular was funded in 1972, before I came to the state office and in 1974 they asked and received funds to replace the roof."

"When I receive a construction clearance request, all it says is that there are 'X' dollars and the purpose is to replace a roof on such and such building. It does not tell me how old the roof is or when it was completed, so naturally I begin to process the request to replace the roof."

"Just because they are completed when he came into office did not relieve him of the responsibility as state architect," Barclay said.

"I will tell you very frankly, I was on the downhill side, but I hadn't reached the peak of bad publicity until the Wichita Eagle editorial appeared asking why wasn't I fired or why I hadn't resigned," said Krueger. "That editorial just turned me inside out to think that someone who had never called me or met me for the facts would just sit down and write an editorial like that."

AROUND THE WORLD

TEL AVIV—Twenty-five black Americans, who Israel claims intended to settle here illegally as members of a "Black Hebrew" sect, will be expelled from the country today, Israeli officials said Sunday.

"Black Hebrews" are members of a messianic sect of about 250 American blacks, mostly from Chicago and Detroit, who live in the town of Dimona in southern Israel's Negev Desert. They claim to be descended from the original Hebrew people and want the right to live in Israel.

KING WILLIAM'S TOWN—Almost 20,000 mourners, fists and voices raised in black-power salutes and songs, thronged an open-air sports stadium Sunday for the funeral of Steve Biko in a massive outpouring of anti-government fervor that is rare in tightly controlled, white-ruled South Africa.

They were joined by top U.S. diplomats and other foreign representatives in paying tribute to the black leader.

MOSCOW—The Soviet Union joined the United States Sunday in pledging to adhere to the existing strategic arms limitation SALT pact while negotiations continue toward hammering out a new accord.

A Soviet government statement reported by the official news agency Tass said Moscow would avoid taking any steps incompatible with the current SALT agreement—set to expire Oct. 3—provided the United States shows the same restraint.

ACROSS THE NATION

WASHINGTON—The Justice Department has hidden more than 2,000 persons, most of them ex-mobsters, under false identities in communities far from their homes since launching its witness protection program in 1969.

The program is costing taxpayers $14 million a year.

WASHINGTON—The Carter administration planned to take its fight for the Panama Canal treaty to Congress today as the committee that must ratify it begins hearings on relinquishing control of the waterway.

WASHINGTON—In a policy shift that could mean more jobs for workers around the world, the International Monetary Fund is urging its member nations to speed up economic growth whenever possible to erase the threat of a renewed recession.

The week-long annual joint meeting of the IMF and the World Bank will open here today.

NEW YORK—Penniless but thankful, six great-grandchildren of the late Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie have reached America after a secret escape that took them through five nations.

Their arrival Saturday night ended an undercover journey across Europe and the Atlantic that had its roots in the political turmoil that followed the overthrow of the Selassie reign.

WSU acquires book store for parking lot site

The University's consolidation efforts have also included the purchase of the old Gentry Shop and the two houses behind it.

Platt indicates care will be taken in any building done. "When we put in a parking lot we have to be concerned about the surrounding residential area. We have to screen our parking."

In laying out the various purchase proposals, Platt works very closely with the University's Land Use and Design Committee, which must approve any land use of the campus.

The purchasing is done by WSU's Board of Trustees. Randy Putman is coordinating this effort for the board and also does the negotiating and buying.

The University end of it is not the human end of it. A veritable WSU landmark (the man and the store) is about to be removed forever.

"Thirty days and he'll be out," said Platt.

"I've had the book store here since December of 1961," said Whitesell.

The interesting thing about Whitesell is his calm and carefree manner. He indicated he is not angry or bitter at anyone. In fact, he was surprised that anyone would suggest he should be.

"I'm an oldster," he said. "I don't fret."

The redeeming factor in his situation is his self-proclaimed mobility.

"I'm more or less footloose," he said.

Meat & Potatoes

By Patrick Jennings

Synopsis: As you may well remember, last week, in the first episode of my serialization of my most recent novel: Bar Wars, Princess Gee had been kidnapped by the boys from the Death Bar.

What you may not remember is that during the week that has passed, from that episode to this, Nuke Caterwaller, his nearly constant companion (the midget in the metal suit) Arthur Detour, and the equally odd Ben Nairobi, the world's oldest barfly, have set out to raid the Death Bar and rescue Princess Gee.

We find Nuke, Ben and Art crouched in an alley behind the Death Bar, planning their course of action...

"It's like this, Nuke," said Ben Nairobi, attaching his lips to the neck of a bottle of Barcelona Sweet Red. Sucking like a Hoover until the last drop sizzled across his uvula, he pried open Arthur Detour's jaws and dropped the bottle in his mouth.

"It's like this. Your father never would have sent me into a place like the Death Bar—alone!"

"Listen, you drunken sot! My father would have sent you before he would have sent me!"

"Hardly, Nuke. I don't know if your father ever mentioned this to you before, but once, a long time ago, in a bar far, far away, he said to me, 'Ben, if you're ever in a tight situation, such as, if you were outside a bar full of ax-murderers, chain saw demons and degenerates, trying to rescue a bar-baby with the aid of some jerk who claims to be my son—I want him, instead of you, to be the one who goes into the bar to look for her.'"

"Really?" asked Nuke.

"Would I lie to you?" asked Ben in a not-so-sober tone.

"I don't know," said Nuke.

"Does the Pope have lips?" asked Ben.

"I've never seen..."

Ben staggered to his feet and grabbed Nuke's arm, pulling him up.

"Go on in there, Nuke. If you find Princess Gee, give us the high-sign, and we'll meet you at the back door with the Vista-Cruiser."

"But, what if they want to beat me up? They're a rough bunch of ax-murderers, chain saw demons and degenerates. I don't want to get hurt."

"All right, Nuke, all right. Those boys in there, they've made some mistakes. They've made a few bad days. Haven't we all? And besides, your friend, the talking garbage can, and I will be right here at the back door to help you if the going gets too rough."

"But...what if I don't make it to the back door?"

"We'll still be there waiting for you—whenever you do make it."

"I need something to protect myself. I'm not going in there without some kind of weapon."

"You already have a weapon, Nuke."

"All I've got is a can opener. It's no kind of weapon. I need some real protection—something along the order of a Thompson sub-machine gun with a couple of those huge drum clips full of dum-dum bullets. And maybe half-dozen grenades. That would at least make me feel a little safer."

Ben glanced furtively over his shoulder, suspiciously, at Arthur Detour, and questioningly at Nuke.

"The Stench be with you, Nuke." Ben said as he pushed Nuke toward the door.

"Screw you too, Jasper." Nuke growled as he box-stepped backwards toward Ben.

"I beg your pardon," said Ben.

"And, if I've told you once, I've told you a thousand times. I don't like beggars!" said Nuke.

"All seriousness aside, Nuke, the Stench is with you. It's with all of us. It will protect you from those maniacs in the Death Bar."

"How do you figure?" Nuke asked suspiciously.

"It's like a protective aura of scent that no mortal can penetrate."

"I don't smell anything," Nuke said, sniffing.

"That's because it's not working. It only works when it's needed. It's kind of like the Emperor's New Clothes."

"Oh," said Nuke. "Now I get it." "Good," said Ben. "Now get in there. Find Princess Gee, and get her to the back door. We're counting on you, Nuke."

Nuke shuffled nervously toward the door. The sign on the door said, 'Be 18 or Be Dead.' Nuke took his wallet out of his pocket, removed his driver's license, took a deep breath, took several deep breaths, hyper-ventilated, nearly passed out, and opened the door to the Death Bar.

Nuke was blinded by a flash of light. He felt a cold metal artifact pressing against his right temple. "Got an I.D.?" a sledgehammer voice demanded.

"...and so I was asking Nuke if he knew if there were any vitamins in carpet, because you see, I noticed there were lots of carpet scraps lying around, all over the place and I thought..." twitted a familiar voice from the back of the room. "The Stench is with me," murmured Nuke. "The Stench is with me..."

Next week: The not-so-exciting conclusion of Bar Wars.

Shockers lose 14-0 lead

For Wichita State University fans, the game looked good for a while. The Shockers played nearly flawless football in the first half of their contest with Kansas State Saturday night in Cessna Stadium, but succumbed to 21 second-half points to go down to the Wildcats 21-14 before 28,724 fans. The crowd was the second largest in Cessna Stadium history.

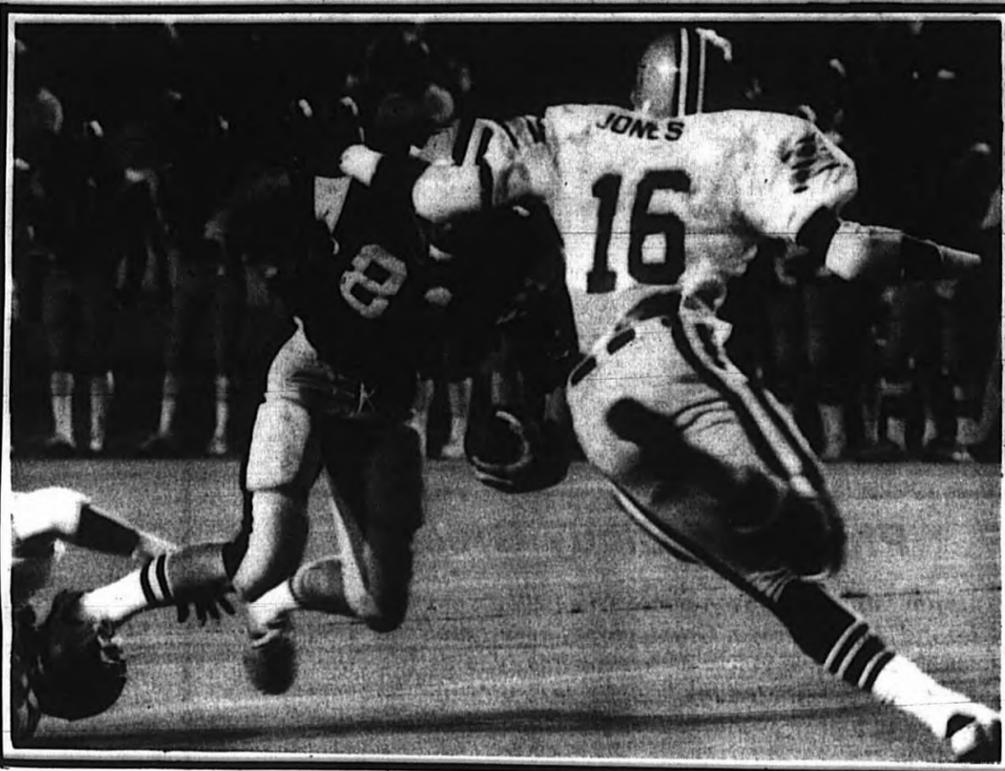

The Shockers built a 14-0 halftime lead on a eight-yard run by Payton Bailey in the closing seconds of the first quarter, and on a 28-yard scamper by Mickey Collins in the second quarter. Kent Van Vleet booted both extra points.

Both WSU scoring plays were set up by KSU mistakes. The first occurred when Wildcat punter Don Birdsey could not handle a high snap from center and was run out of bounds on the KSU eight-yard line. Bailey scored on the next play.

Volleyballers take first-place honors

Wichita State University's women's volleyball team brought home first-place honors from the Central Missouri State University Tournament Friday and Saturday.

The Shockers kicked off the two-day event with victories over Northeast Missouri State and Southwest Baptist. WSU struggled in the first games of both matches, but won the second games both at 15-6.

WSU lost the first duel with Southwest Missouri State 9-15. The Shockers battled to a 15-11 win in the second game, then held the SMS squad to five points in the third to win the match.

CMS, the host team, dealt the Shockers their only defeat of the tourney. However, WSU also lost Kim Strathe who went out in the second game of the match with an ankle injury and did not return to the lineup.

WSU squeezed by CMS in the first game of the contest 15-13. With Strathe out of the lineup, the Shocker adjustment proved shaky as they lost consecutive games at 9-15 and 6-15.

The Shockers then came back to take a lopsided contest from Northwest Missouri State 15-5 and 15-4, then rolled to a 15-0, 15-6 victory over CMS's second team.

CMS's first team finished second in the tourney while SMS took third.

Shlechter: motivation is key to winning

By KATHY IVY

Don't tell Sarah Schlechter that tennis is not religion. She believes that it is.

Shifting through an array of papers she calls "organization," she withdraws her "bible," a yellow mimeographed paper that begins: "Courage: If you meet with Triumph and Disaster and treat those two just the same..."

And somewhere in the course of her conversation, she will list her own ten commandments for the game of tennis.

Shlechter, who has been an active player, an instructor and a club pro, has embarked upon a new facet of the game as coach of the Wichita State women's tennis team. Known locally as the "tennis evangelist," this enthusiast knows no limit to the sport.

"Motivation," she said, "is what you need to be a great tennis player. My feeling has always been to play your best and get to know what the game is all about. If you are motivated, you get anything out of anyone. If you are not, even if you are talented, you are not going to give yourself to it."

Thus, motivation is established as the key element for the slightest tennis buff.

Shlechter is also a firm believer in the three C's.

"You see, confidence is one of the main ingredients of a tennis player. Confidence, concentration, and control.

"We are a different animal when we get into a match. If our mental capacities fail us, with it goes all our expertise. It flies out the window.

"Expertise...I like that in tennis...that is beautiful because it embraces so much. It paints the picture of what we are looking for."

Another of Schlechter's commanding guidelines is conditioning.

"I am a great believer in getting the body ready," she said. "Because if the body is not ready, then all the understanding of this game falls to naught."

Patience plays an important and sometimes decisive role in the building of a good player, according to Schlechter.

The first few active years require that a player learn the fundamentals, which, Schlechter said, "takes at least a year to groove. People are so impatient to learn tennis. They think they've got to be as good as Chris Evert immediately. It takes at least ten years of hard work to be a champ.

"Tennis is a reflex, and if the reflex is wrong, it takes years to undo that. Good habits are formed, and who can take that away from you? Nobody. But you must be patient."

Shlechter also stresses desire and dedication to the sport as well as the importance of anticipation.

However, she feels that unless all these components are blended into enjoyment, then the efforts are wasted.

"I came into this game to enjoy it and to do it to the best of my ability," she said. "In order to be a champ and to be tops, you've got to give all your time to it. There is no substitute for it. We must recognize that."

quarterback Dan Manucci and the Shockers marched 52 yards in six plays, capped by Collins run for their second, and last, touchdown.

The Shocker defense, headed up by Jankowski, tackle Ted Vincent and linebacker Ron Shumon, limited the Wildcats to one yard rushing on 22 attempts in the first half. KSU quarterbacks Manucci and Wendell Henrickson had a little more success through the air, getting 94 yards on nine completions.

But while the first half belonged to WSU, the second half was all Kansas State.

A face mask penalty on a punt return and three successive runs by Ken Lovely enabled the Wildcats to get on the scoreboard in the third quarter. Lovely's seven-yard touchdown run and the extra point kick by Kris Thompson cut the Shocker lead to 14-7.

The Cats tied the score on their next possession when Henrickson found his tight end Paul Coffman, alone in the end zone. Thompson's kick made it 14-14.

The final Wildcat tally came on a WSU punt attempt. Bob Cicero's snap went over Van Vleet's head into the WSU end zone where the 'Cats Mike Osborn fell on the loose ball. Thompson added his third extra point to supply the final margin.

The Shockers tried desperately to catch up in the final 11 minutes but the KSU defense held strong.

The win was the first of the season for Kansas State and put its record at 1-2. WSU suffered its third loss in a row and stands at 1-3.

The Wildcats rolled up 109 yards rushing in the second half and 52 passing for 256 yards total offense while the Shockers could manage only 27 yards on the ground and 28 in the air for 225 yards in total offense.

Sarah Schlechter, coach of Wichita State women's tennis team bubbles with enthusiasm for the sport. Schlechter, who estimates she has taught 6,000 Wichitans the game, has very definite ideas about what makes a winner.

Four-team tennis event goes to OU

The University of Oklahoma prevailed over Wichita State University's women's tennis team Saturday in a four-team event at Southwestern College in Winfield.

WSU's Jodi Buterbaugh claimed the only first-place singles finish for the Shockers, while Kay St. Peter, Cheryl Maloney and Kathy Wilde all finished second behind the Sooners, whose program extends year-round.

Mary Pecht and Kori Gregg finished third in the singles competition behind OU and host Southwestern, while the fourth team in the event, Washburn, finished consistently behind WSU.

In the doubles competition, the teams of Gregg-St. Peter and Wilde-Maloney once again settled for second behind teams from OU.

WSU journeys to Tulsa today to face Oral Roberts University. This weekend the team travels to the Drake Invitational.

A.S.K. Students Helping Students

You may not be aware of it, but you belong to a Student organization that lobbies the Kansas Capitol for issues which effect you. ASK employs a full time lobbyist in Topeka and a Director on each of the University Campuses. Each year ASK holds a Legislative Assembly to choose 3 to 5 issues which we will lobby for. The Legislative Assembly is a representative body comprised of one delegate per 1,000 students at each school.

The following survey will be used as a guide for the Legislative Assembly when they select the 1978 lobbying priorities. It will only take you a few moments to answer the questions. Please take the time. Don't allow others to speak for you.

- 1) Should ASK support reduced penalties for the possession of small amounts of marijuana?
Yes _____ No _____ Undecided _____
- 2) Should the people of the State of Kansas have the right to initiate State constitutional amendments?
Yes _____ No _____ Undecided _____
- 3) Should the people of the State of Kansas be able to initiate State Legislation?
Yes _____ No _____ Undecided _____
- 4) Should the State of Kansas enact environmental protection legislation requiring a deposit for bottles, cans and other materials capable of being recycled.

Tennis coach lists ten commandments in her native Brooklyn. From there, it was on to Los Angeles where she took lessons from Jerry Teagarden, better known as Virginia Wade's pro.

The tennis circuit there took her on a stint of celebrity tournaments at the homes of such movie stars as Lloyd Bridges, Spencer Tracy and Charlton Heston.

She neglected the opportunity to turn pro because "the motivation to be a top player was never there. I never demanded perfection knowing that I would never achieve top level because I couldn't give all of that time."

After moving to Wichita, Shlechter was recruited into teaching by the head of the tennis department at the YWCA.

"I was reluctant at first," she said. "But, I thought, 'Why not and see how it works out?' After seeing the enthusiasm and viewing it, it grew into a situation which I felt I was enjoying.

"And, of course, you don't have the energy for everything, so either you are going to teach or give all your time to playing. It didn't bother me because I did enjoy teaching. I have never felt I was sacrificing.

"That is where my forte is to bring out the best in others."

For the past three years, she has been the pro at the Rolling Hills Country Club, conducted a television series and for the past seven years has attended the Tennis Teachers' Institute conference at New York.

"There," she said, "you get to meet with all the top tennis players such as Margaret Court, Billie Jean King and Arthur Ashe. You get to know their expertise. They share with you the why, the when and the wherefore. I feel that strongly about the game to want to know the very best."

"Coaching is still another medium. Here, the girls already know the fundamentals. Now we bring out the court sense. Now we bring out the expertise, the understanding of where to be. If there are any glaring weaknesses, we correct them.

"I love Wichita. I think it has anything that anybody wants. We do want a community this size. When it's too large, you can't really do too much."

She estimates she has taught almost 6,000 people in Wichita her game of tennis.

Golf team comes in fourth

The Wichita State University golf team finished fourth in the All-College Golf Tournament in Oklahoma City last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

All-American Don Lee paced the Shocker squad finishing third in the individual standings with scores of 76-68-70. Matt Seitz carded a 219 for the Shockers while Bob Pancratz finished at 222 and Eric Mork at 227.

Houston, the defending NCAA champion, won the tourney with a score of 863. Oklahoma State was second at 870 and Oklahoma finished third at 881. The Shockers were one stroke behind the Sooners.

Lee finished one stroke behind runner-up Houston's Kalua Makalena, who shot 213. Makalena's teammate, John Stark, won the tournament with a three-round total of 209.
