89 Students Get Checks For Service

CEP Students Are Not Affected By Reductions

Eighty-nine students at the university who are attending school and working about campus under provisions of the College Student Employment Project—a part of WA employment—received their first checks from Comptroller Roy W. Elliott last week. The total sum of the checks distributed amounted $595.71.

Students Must Continue

The government officials feel that Mr. Elliott, "that these students have undertaken a large amount of work, and it would be impossible for them to continue in classroom work if this pressure of income were cut off."

Jobs Are Listed

The jobs to which the students have been assigned and also the number of each group follows: 18 on grounds; 22 library; 12 photographers and office help; 20 in carpenter and laboratory workers; 2 in time; 1 miscellaneous.

Try-outs for the next University "Hayfever" will be continued next week, according to George D. Rees, head of the dramatic department. The cast will be announced next week.

Everyone Pledges Support As New Life Is Injected Here by President Jardine

New Head Receives Unparalleled Ovation In First Appearance Before Students and Faculty

Commanding popularity which never before has been accorded an incoming official at the University, President William M. Jardine Monday morning appeared before the student body for the first time and indicated that it was his desire to give his best "in a community where we are real Americans."

COMMENTS FROM THE PRESIDENT

"My first job is to learn at first hand how everything is," said Dr. William M. Jardine last Thursday morning as he entered into his new work at the University to brighten up a drab, rainy day.

"Everything will go on just as usual. I want to get acquainted. The longest way around is sometimes the shortest way across."

"The problem facing the University of Wichita is not one of immediate expansion."

"The citizens of Wichita are spending enough money for the University and my problem is to see that they get the most value possible for the money that they are spending."

"The school will develop winning teams in athletics. Athletics are a fine thing, but we must remember that there is no real difference between an athlete and a gentleman."

"I am here to cooperate with the faculty of the University, to understand the problems of everyone, and to work things out to the satisfaction of the faculty and the citizens of the city."

gram work where we all have the same point of view of life," began Dr. Jardine after having been introduced by Mrs. Irene M. Gouldner, chairman of the Board of Regents. "Here we are real Americans, why shouldn't we have a better University of Wichita? I'm not so much interested in the size of the school as I am in its quality."
The spirit of inspiration which filled the room as the president spoke, was swelled by the informality which he injected into the otherwise formal ceremony.
"I am certainly glad to come to Wichita," he continued. "Surely you are aware of the fact that it isn't every community that is willing to raise taxes to support an institution of higher learning such as this. I want to serve where folks look at things like that; I want to belong to a community of that kind."
"To Get School Into N. C.
When one hand is in his pocket, the former minister to Egypt commanded the attention of everyone in the auditorium as he spoke his greeting with many humorous remarks.
"The first thing that I'm going to do is to get us back in the North Central Association," he assured the students as they burst into applause. "That's what we can do and still stay in. I am confident that we will be reinstated."
Dr. Jardine pointed out that he is a believer in the possibilities of the great Southwest. It is his opinion that within the next 25 years some of the leadership that is really needed in this troubled world will be produced right here.
"The big trouble in the United States today, perhaps, is that there are few leaders," he declared. "Yet

Kappa Delta Pi President Reports Meet

Educational Speeches Include Many Topics

NOTE: Garner Shriver, president of the University chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, national education fraternity, returned to Wichita last Friday having attended the national convention of Kappa Delta Pi in Cleveland. He presents a brief report of the convention.

By GARNER SHRIVER

Kappa Delta Pi chapter of the University is no longer the youngest in Kappa Delta Pi. The youngest chapters of San Francisco, California, and Winona, Minnesota, were present at the national convention of Kappa Delta Pi. There were delegates representing chapters of the organization in attendance, exchanging ideas, conducting the business of the organization, and forming new friendships. The outstanding feature of the convention was an address given by Mary E. Woolley, president of Holyoke College and a states delegate to the national conference. She said that she was toward an international peace based on reason rather than force. Peace was slow because it is not yet the will to peace, she explained, as a willingness to pay the price for peace. We pay a price for a terrible price it is. If we would have peace we must pay for it—the price of cooperation—so-called sacrifices.

There must be a mobilization of opinion by way of the press, radio, the public platform, group action, and informal conversation. "There will be no war if the people do not want it."

William C. Bagley of Teachers College, Columbia, in speaking at the convention upon the subject of "The Future of American Education," said that there is to be further advances in educational expansion after this depression. He pointed out that after previous panic or crisis there are certain pronounced educational developments. He predicted that the two major educational advances are the development of the college, and adult education.

Some national officers who served the organization for several years were re-elected. Dean McCracken of Ohio University continues as president. Other officers include: Dr. Florence Stratton, Teachers College, Columbia, vice president; Dr. A. L. Hall, New York University, second vice president; Prof. E. F. Williams, Oberlin College, Tiffin, Ohio, treasurer; and Dr. William G. Teachers College, Columbia, advisor.

Weddings Beat Depression War

Samuel P. Mogelowsky, of the World Clothing Exchange, New York City, has found a way to beat the depression, according to the New York World-Telegram. Its indoor sport that packs them in, his store (suits $7.98 up) specializes in weddings. Last week Mr. Mogelowsky ran what the typed announcements referred to as a "double-headed all-star Jewish wedding" at Cooper Union and the crowd was so enormous that he thinks that he will have to hire the Madison Square Garden for the next one.

Two thousand people, all neatly outfitted by the World Clothing Exchange, saw the wedding.

Mr. Mogelowsky runs a radio station in his clothing store, where on his broadcast he appeals to young people getting married to telephone him, and the World Exchange will take care of it all. Incidentally, the owner insists that the people involved lay their wedding clothes at his store.

At the wedding, the clever merchant does everything up brown, not leaving anything out of the program. The minister, flowers, clothes, music and even food.

"The weddings, you can see for yourselves is done up to perfection. If a millionaire would make it he couldn't do better," spoke one of the men taking advantage of this unique opportunity.

Mr. Mogelowsky has made one slip however—he never has participated in the weddings, but is content to see others married at his expense, and as it seems, he is overjoyed to do it.

Blondes Relinquish Prestige to Darker Sisters of Today

Gentlemen prefer brunettes—Anita Loos was wrong. This fact came to light when the men students of the University of Western Ontario gave the specifications of their ideal woman.

The girl must have long black hair—that is the first essential. In addition to that she must have blue eyes, light complexion, stand five feet, five inches, and weigh 122 pounds. She must have a sense of humor, be romantic, athletic, and a good dancer. Brilliance is not necessary to fulfill the requirements.

This is the idea of the Canadian youth—in the United States the young men seem to have far different ideas.

The gentlemen of the senior class at City College, New York City prefer girls with chestnut hair and dark eyes, but she has something in common with the heroine of the famous Anita Loos novel—she smokes, nicks, drinks and gets.

She must be a college girl, clever and beautiful at the same time. She could be described in one fervent syllable, to wit—"A-a-a-h."

Clever, canny lads, those seniors; they want their ideal sweetheart to have a bankroll. It will not keep them from marriage. The consensus would be that a girl with a net worth of $25,000 would do. Last year's seniors were satisfied with $50,000 brides.

To support this ravishing creature—who weighs 118 pounds, stands five feet three and a half inches and is 18 years old—the senior of 1934 expects to be earning $4,425 in five years, as compared with the modest sum of $2,750, five years after graduation, that the seniors of 1933 hoped to be earning.

More than $24,000,000 in gold coin, gold certificates, and bullion was returned under the treasury anti-boarding order.

Debaters Given Transportation

That the debate team should be allowed $30.50 to attend the five day meet at Durant, Okla., beginning Friday, was the decision of the Student Council in a business meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Professor A. E. Jansen, of the economics department, and CWA assignment officer for the University, points out that many Quaker instructors with "pet" lines of research supplementary to their departments, may now have them developed by the new student assistants, who will collect data and conduct intensive searches for detail.

A short biography of each person is printed along with the photographs of the more prominent citizens of the state.

Names appearing are: Leo W. Allman, director of the school of Journalism; Dr. Hazel Branch, head of the department of zoology; Dr. William Goldsmith, professor of embryology; Dr. Lambertus Hekhuis, dean of the College of Liberal Arts; Dr. Earl K. Hillbrand, dean of the Graduate School; Mrs. Minnie Ferguson Owens, instructor in voice in the University School of Music and Dramatic Art; Leslie Sipple, dean of the College of Education; Dr. Harold Foght, former president of the University and Clinton, Col. Lester, former librarian; Dean Hillbrand and Dr. Allman's photographs appear in the issue.

Students are granted two parking tickets before being summoned to the dean's office.

Foster's Early American Songs Received By University Library

The production of the sets as a whole required over eight years, especially made rag paper, watermarked, about one thousand plates and over one million impressions in all were made. The entire collection is encased in buckram, dust-proof, slip cases and steel shell containers. Complete comprehensive indexes are furnished, including such items as title, author, chronology, publisher, dedication, and first line.

The original materials from which the reprints were made are owned by the Library of Congress at Washington, the Boston Public Library, the library at Oberlin College, and by private parties, including descendants and friends of the family. Most of the songs were published by New York houses, including John Daily, Horace Waters, Fifth, Pond and Company, and others. The first edition of Foster's songs was copyrighted December 9, 1853, although his first composition, "Open Thy Little Love" was written as early as 1842.

Particularly interesting is the style of printing in mode at the time of publishing. On many of the cover pieces are lovely old-fashioned drawings depicting the theme of the particular song. Several Godley prints, on the backs, advertising fashionable styles for women. Foster's first name is misspelled "Stephen" in one of the copies.

Perhaps the most pretentious work is a vocal duet, "Will Thou Be Gone Love," taken from Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet." However Foster's larger works were largely unsuccessful.

Only a short time ago—in April of 1930—two heretofore unpublished songs appeared in modern sheet music form, "Long Ago Day" and "This Rose Will Remind You." The manuscripts are the property of D. J. Rice, son of Thomas D. Rice, who is remembered as the interpreter of the character of "Jim Crow," so influential to Foster as a youth.

Members of Pi Beta Chi, art club, last Saturday afternoon attended the lecture and exhibition of the paintings of the late John Noble. This lecture took the place of the regular monthly meeting of the club.

Monaco Plans to Sue State of Mississippi

The moss-tidden and here-to-fore discarded law which says, "A state can be sued in the supreme court only by the United States, by another state of the union, or by a foreign country," is about to be used by Monaco to force judgment on Mississippi.

Monaco, Europe's smallest state, with the exception of the Vatican City, was established in 1929, and is the home of the world famous gambling center, Monte Carlo, overlooking the beautiful blue Mediterranean Sea. It is the beauty spot of the world.

The prince-bishop—a non-named through its complete general a few weeks ago, that it would seek leave to sue the state of Mississippi in the United States Supreme Court. The action involves state bonds, held by Monaco, which have been defaulted for more than 90 years.

Co-Ed Devises Her Own Marriage Vows

A modern wedding ceremony eliminating the phrase "I do" and "I will" was devised by a college co-ed. It is a short and simple ceremony with a brand new ceremony of their own. The service opened with a short outline of the duties and responsibilities of marriage.

Such utterances as "Everyone must live his own life in his own way and according to anybody else's standards." "The big people are the people who have learned to stand on their own feet, accept the results of what they do and learn for themselves." "Being afraid never did anyone any good. I know it by the way that I am not afraid for the future. I cannot understand it very well, because I think this is one of the most exciting times to be alive in."

Names Plants After Biblical Resemblances

Did it ever strike you how many religious plants there are? Of course, you have heard of the Judas tree; but do you know that it produces pink or rose-colored flowers which appear earlier than its broad, simple leaves? There are about seven species of the Judas tree, all native to north temperate regions.

But, do you know that Job's tear is a tall, stout cereal of the Old World? The plant is closely related to corn and sometimes reaches its height of eight feet. It takes its name from the hard, shining, tear-like seeds. They have the appearance of bluish-white porcelain, and are used for making jewelry and rosaries. In India the plant is cultivated for food. In China for its medical qualities, and in the United States for a curiosity.

Witch Hazel is a Shrub Perhaps the witch hazel cannot be classed as a religious flower, but it is interesting for its legends. It is a large shrub or small tree, related to the sweet gum, with lacy, toothed leaves. It grows from 15 to 20 feet high in low woods, and southward to Florida and Texas.

Witch-hazel, a tonic and a lotion, is prepared from its leaves. It does not, however, possess any therapeutic value. The witch hazel is famous for the great powers long ascribed to its forked branches. It is called witch hazel because its forked branches supposedly have the power to detect water and minerals.

Passion Flower Colorful Trenchantly interesting and colorful is the symbol of the passion flower. Its history originated among the padres who accompanied the Spaniards in their search for the Gran Quivira. The plant extends in growth from the tropical America to the southern part of the United States. It is called the passion flower because of its fancied resemblance to the instruments of Christ's crucifixion.

There was only one player on the university football squad this year who was graduated from a high school out of the state.

French Celebrate Defense of Island

Mount Saint-Michel, a rock 7.7 (7.7) miles long, England made a last attempt to capture this island—and failed.

This summer, five hundred years ago, France will celebrate the gallant defense of this fortress monastery, and for the first time in history floodlights will illuminate the rocky island.

Aided by 119 knights and approximately 700 men-at-arms, the monks succeeded in repelling the 8,000 picked English soldiers under Lord Scudley, Captain of Somerset. Descendants of those who fought on either side have been invited to attend the celebrations.

The Frog and the Kingfisher

A Modern Aesop Application

A KINGFISHER swooped low over the surface of a pond and seized a young frog by the leg. The frog begged leave of the Kingfisher to make a plea for himself. The Kingfisher dropped to the limb of a tall tree to hear the Frog's defense.

The Kingfisher agreed to the Frog's proposition. But upon returning to the pond the Frog warned all of the Frogs about the Kingfisher and he never again captured a Frog from that pool.

Proponents of municipal ownership make many promises to their fellow citizens. But once the proposition is put over, politics and poor management force promises out of the picture. The steady dependable electric service provided by a reputable private company is the "bird in the hand" of every prosperous community—worth far more than the promises that will be forgotten.

The Frog and the Kingfisher
A Modern Aesop Application

A KINGFISHER swooped low over the surface of a pond and seized a young frog by the leg. The frog begged leave of the Kingfisher to make a plea for himself. The Kingfisher dropped to the limb of a tall tree to hear the Frog's defense.

"If you will take me back to the pond," said the Frog, "I will agree to become your agent among the Frogs. I will decoy them, day by day, to a lonely part of the pond where none can see. I will tell them that I escaped your talons, that they need not fear you. Thus you will profit materially from your confidence in letting me go free."

The Kingfisher agreed to the Frog's proposition. But upon returning to the pond the Frog warned all of the Frogs about the Kingfisher and he never again captured a Frog from that pool.

Fantastic Characters Catch Spirit of Mardi Gras Revels

Showers of confetti flew beneath an aura of carnival abandon at the Alpha Tau Sigma Mardi Gras Frolic, held last Friday night in Henrion Gymnasium annex. Harlan Bond's orchestra, cleverly costumed, accompanied dancers in ensembles carrying out a theme of both romantic history and collegiate cleverness.

Glanced beneath the colored lights were Walter Johnson, a true Mardi Gras Harlequin in black and white frills; Miss Mary B. Stewart, lovely as Queen Mary Stewart; and Mrs. Marjorie Simonet, Aristocrat in the garb of an Oriental. Sheik Miss Virginia Piper appeared in broad-based velvet, Don Shrader and Gordon Reser as white clad surgeons, and Bill Woodin as a convincing Chinaman.

Fashion Decries Importance Of Hose Despite Lengthened Skirts

IN SPITE of all Paris has done for eccentricities in silhouette, what with lengthened skirts, and ruffled shoulders, a woman's legs still hold their important place in fashion's ensemble!

In fact, the less they are revealed, says Dome Paillot, the more important, is that tempting briefness of display! For after all, if a flash of ankle must supplement the entire view so generously offered in years gone by, that flash must be, in itself, perfect in lured good grooming!

In addition, spring fashions reveal a noticeable inclining upwards for sports. Be on your guard, Shockers! Remember that few forms are of artistic proportions, but that many are made to appear so, with the use of good lines, good fabrics, and good colors.

For the leg slightly thick, avoid large heel designs, the all-black, the pinkish, and yellow tones, Sand and misty grey are your allies!

Only experiment can prove to any human eye, those lines and tints which suit her personal equipment. But remember that occasional mistakes must not be stumbling blocks. A coat is never justified in losing sight of smartness in her stockings, until her public has entirely lost sight of the scene behind the chiffons!

Roundabout

Happy days are here again—and we wonder just what provisions are included in the J. B. A. (Jardine Recovery Act)—The New Deal is just a year late here—A new campus couple—Mary Alice Thomas and Leslie Warner—a couple of "Shoekers" at the Alpha Tau slumber party in the person of Alberta Rainbridge and Mary Scott—Marc Marcellus goes "shik-shik" on the Mardi Gras—And two of the cutest kiddies there—Willbur Youle and Vic Blurton—The Alpha Gams going musical with their Male Chorus—Vivian Johnson receiving insistent demands to put in an appearance in the dean of women's office—Basketball men are popping up on the campus again after their little hiatus in Mexico—To boot, discovers a worm on the sidewalk—it won't be long now until some of those barefoot boys with coats of tan will be slinging "Old Man River, Heave-I-Come!"—With things brightening up like they have been we can't help but wonder WHAT WILL HAPPEN ON THE CAMPUS NEXT WEEK! Students Fear Inky Darkness

Students at the University of Wyoming recently confessed a fear of automobile accidents and a fear of being alone in the dark. In a survey conducted by the personnel office of the University, forty-nine out of 100 of the students confessed to a fear of automobile accidents and of other personal dangers; 29 admitted they were afraid of being alone in the dark.

This survey which covered a group, three-fourths of which were women, classified fears under four heads: illness and death, personal danger, occupational and financial fears, and social adjustments. Only eight of the examined group listed a fear for others in danger, and a fear of high places and falling.

Thirty-seven students said they were afraid of receiving low grades or of not passing in class work, and 32 were afraid of being liked or loved by friends especially among the opposite sex. Fear of water and drowning, animals, storms, leaving home, and meeting new people were listed as some of the other fears.

W. P. Reed, director of the personnel department at Wyoming, commented upon the number who admitted fear of low grades, saying he believed such a phobia was trained into people by the stress laid on the importance of making high grades. Mr. Reed further explained that psychologists believe of four fears are conditioned and not instinctive: fear of automobile accidents is no doubt due to the alarming frequency of accidents which impresses the danger on one's mind.

In the states of Michigan and Wisconsin where there are large deposits of lead ore and particularly that known as galena, it has been observed that in many localities the ground surrounding the deposit is covered with a large growth of the shrub called amorphia esculenta. Because this plant has for so long been associated with the presence of lead it has come to be known as the lead plant.

Dr. Kari Sempeier, professor of German, entertained a small group of guests at a studio party at his home at 1647 North Holyoke, Sunday evening. He gave an illustrated talk on the second part of Goethe's "Faust" which is seldom reviewed. Guests included Otto L. Fischer, Miss Marguerite Munsel, Miss Mattilda Gamm, Miss Alice Whitaker, Miss Virginia Lawrence, Miss Mary Hall and Mrs. Dorothy Burkholder.
